

THE DAILY CITIZEN.
The CITIZEN is the most extensively circulated and widely read newspaper in Western North Carolina.
It is the interest of public integrity, honest government, and prosperous industry, and it knows no personal allegiance in treating public issues.
The CITIZEN publishes the dispatches of the Associated Press, which now covers the whole world in its scope. It has other facilities of advanced journalism for gathering news from all quarters, with every thinness fully edited to occupy the smallest space.
Specimen copies of this edition will be sent free to any one sending their address.
Terms—Daily, $5 for one year; $3 for six months; 50 cents for one month. Carriers will deliver the paper in every part of the city to subscribers, and parties wanting it will please call at the City office.
Advertising Rates—Reasonable, and made known on application at this office. All transient advertisements must be paid in advance.
Reading notices ten cents per line. Obits, marriage and society notices, and other notices exceeding ten lines or fifty cents per inch.

THE PEABODY FUND—SOME OF THE GOOD IT HAS DONE.
We are indebted to the Hon. J. L. M. Curry, L. D., for a copy of his memorial address before the Winthrop Training School at Columbia, S. C., on the 12th of last May. Like everything said and written by that gentleman, the address is elegant, scholarly and instructive.
Dr. Curry is now one of the trustees of the Peabody fund, and is therefore enabled to give us a clear insight into the motives, principles and aims of that magnificent benefaction; originating in the pure, enlightened benevolence of Mr. Peabody, seeing the grievous wants that were crying for relief, but with majestic magnanimity, disclaiming all control of the benevolence, leaving it to be applied, and directed by those who were to become the true beneficiaries; unlike the ill-considered beneficence of the ill-considered benefactor, seeking power under the guise of generosity, and sapping the foundation of independence under the sham of enlightenment.
The gifts and endowments of Mr. Peabody were more timely and more effective than even their unquestioned magnitude have gained credit for. In the after-days of prosperity, in the sunshine of a settled peace, it is easy and natural to forget the years of struggle with poverty, the days of contention and the better experience of oppression. This is the happy condition of the human character. Those who now survive the humiliating and impoverished period succeeding the war, live with dull memories and blunted sensibilities, and in the enjoyment of restored peace and prosperity, almost question the realities of a past experience. To whose minds those times present themselves as a distressing nightmare, a dream rather than a series of distressful facts. Another series of actors has come upon the field to whom those experiences have no meaning at all; for relatively their young lives dawned into maturity and action under environments pleasant and natural, however new and unnatural they might appear to an older generation.
In his address Dr. Curry pictures the times immediately succeeding the war, its trials, its miseries, its deprivations, its humiliations, its poverty. Lessons so impressive it would seem would be ineffaceable; yet we have seen in political as well as in material experiences, how those lessons are forgotten in the peevish contentions with present trifles, and how childishly ready men are to welcome back the calamities from which they once freed themselves, either through apathy, or as prompt way to live over some present, incomparably less grievance.
Perhaps some will recognize the truth of Dr. Curry's picture of the actual condition of the South at the close of the war. During the four years' struggle up to the surrender at Appomattox, April 9, 1865, and Gen. Johnston's surrender in North Carolina, April 26, all resources of men and means and money had been freely offered and necessarily accepted. Many of the country's necessities of life and of the most useful medicines became unobtainable luxuries. Women and children and aged men often cultivated the fields for scanty bread. All corporations were suspended, banks were closed, securities were depreciated or made valueless, railways were dismantled, business was paralyzed, homes were desolated or burned, lives were surrendered, wives were widowed, children were orphaned. When the catastrophe came there was no currency except as could be obtained from the army of occupation in exchange for eggs, fowls, vegetables, milk and butter. Academies and colleges had been closed. Young men had been arrested in their educational plans. Every available energy was needed and had been consecrated to clothing and subsistence. The country was in a state of stagnation, exhaustion, deplorable poverty and bankruptcy.
The political and social chaos that followed encouraged no hope of relief.
It was held in practice that the constitution, quondam the "rebellious" States, had been suspended or abolished. Instead of welcoming the States to their original or former rights and equality, they were put under the yoke. Officers, civil and military, were invested with preponderant powers, and their illegal acts were sustained and legitimized. Men, incompetent and of bad characters, were made governors, judges, marshals, attorneys, agents of Freedmen's Bureaus, and they perpetrated flagrant wrongs. Some of these men arrogated executive, legislative, judicial and ecclesiastical functions. Rights regarded as inalienable were rudely wrested from the people of ten States. The deluded negroes were used as blind, irresponsible agents in maladministration. Whatever tempted cupidity or avarice and was profitable in some places was taken, irrespective of private ownership or legal inhibitions and guarantees.
These extracts are insufficient to show the appalling condition to which the South had been reduced. To throw of such a burden peacefully, patiently, manfully and successfully bespeaks a grandeur of character in the Southern people to which the world has as yet shown no parallel.
Of course with the destruction of every other resource, disappeared every fund for the support of education. Then it was that the magnificent, thoughtful and considerate benefaction of Mr. Peabody was applied. We quote from Dr. Curry:

"In this hour of gloom, poverty and despondency, when the South lay prostrate, faint, bleeding, suffering, a Northern man, I am especially glad to say, a Massachusetts man, did not pass by on the other side, but came where she was, and seeing, had compassion, and devised and acted and relieved. His big, patriotic, philanthropic heart yearned in unexpressed tenderness, and he studied and consulted how most effectively to give direction and force to his sympathies and convictions.
George Peabody, touched by 'the urgent and pressing physical needs of an almost impoverished people,' which 'must for some years preclude them from making, by unaided effort, such advances in education and such progress in the diffusion of knowledge among all classes as every lover of his country must earnestly desire,' gave in trust to sixteen Trustees, 'most of whom have been my personal and special friends,' the sum of one million of dollars, 'for the promotion and encouragement of intellectual, moral or industrial education among the young of the more destitute portions of the southern and southwestern States of the Union.' In addition to this gift, he placed in the hands of the Trustees, 'Planters' Bank bonds of the State of Mississippi, amounting with interest to about eleven hundred thousand dollars.' (Of the application of the aid derived from the fund, Dr. Curry says:

"So to distribute the aid as to make it effective in the production of a permanent and self-sustaining system of popular education, it was deemed advisable to select separate schools at such central and radiating points as would be most efficient in their influence upon others. Encouragement was given to private efforts, and the expense by supplementing the efforts made by communities. Such conditions were imposed as to secure from the people three or four or five dollars for every dollar paid from the income of the fund, so as to make the indirect results of the administration outweigh those that were direct. The inflexible rule of Peabody aid, plainly expressed, was to help those who helped themselves. A general pro rata or per capita distribution would have dissipated the fund and produced no valuable results. The idea was to supplement judiciously and helpfully, so as, using the apt words of Professor Harris of Richmond College, 'to secure the best means to concentration for strength and diffusion for relief.' A great problem in public charity is to relieve indigence without fostering indolence and recklessness. The simple rule of furnishing proportionate aid for a larger term has been helped in awakening local vigilance and pride, and training to liberality and to the conviction that rudimentary education is properly and wisely a permanent charge in property. All along it was declared that this aid to individual schools was a temporary expedient, and that the schools must become a part of the general system of State institutions, in to help would be self-sustaining. Peabody money has thus multiplied its widening influence and power five-fold and ten-fold. Now, all the Southern States have well organized and increasingly popular systems of free schools, and the administrative union of the fund, help is given to such schools as are carried on under State auspices and control."

Three recent incidents might induce the hope that the course of justice was returning to natural channels, and that reason is more venerable than the first law of nature. Yet, the negro preacher brought back from Pennsylvania to South Carolina to answer for a murder committed twelve years ago, has been tried and acquitted, and has gone back to his flock in Pittsburg; Sullivan, delivered up by the Governor of New York on the requisition of the Governor of Mississippi for violation of certain laws of the latter State, was put on trial Monday, with strong prospect of conviction, and assignment to all the penalties incurred of fine and imprisonment; and lastly, Gov. Sney of Alabama, has, or will make requisition on Gov. Gordon of Georgia, for the extradition of Messrs. Calhoun and Williamson, the parties to the late feud. Ten years ago Gov. Gordon might have laughed in Gov. Sney's face at such a demand. Now he says he will yield it with great readiness.
The News and Observer of the 13th, says, Telegrams received here Sunday evening announced that a destructive fire was raging in New Bern. Later it was learned that both of the mammoth factories of Stinson & Company were totally consumed together with about a million and a half feet of lumber. The New Bern depot might have some of the most valuable machinery of the life and of the most useful medicines became unobtainable luxuries. Women and children and aged men often cultivated the fields for scanty bread. All corporations were suspended, banks were closed, securities were depreciated or made valueless, railways were dismantled, business was paralyzed, homes were desolated or burned, lives were surrendered, wives were widowed, children were orphaned. When the catastrophe came there was no currency except as could be obtained from the army of occupation in exchange for eggs, fowls, vegetables, milk and butter. Academies and colleges had been closed. Young men had been arrested in their educational plans. Every available energy was needed and had been consecrated to clothing and subsistence. It is gratifying to notice the march forward of southerners, no matter in what part of the world they may be situated. The fact of the promotion of Mr. Henry Vignaud, ex-secretary of the United States Legation in France, to the rank of a Knight Commander in the Legion of Honor has been recorded. We are glad also to record the fact that Mr. Vignaud is a native of New Orleans, was a well-known journalist before the war, and was a captain in the South Louisiana regiment in the Confederate Army. Since the war he has resided in Paris, where he has won great distinction as a scholar and writer.
Dr. Parker Prays came Van-Old, Rosaline, Ungaline and Diamond nail powder having now become the ladies' favorites, at F. L. Jacobs' drug store, these popular manure articles may always be found, together with pocket emery board, or orange wood sticks, nail scissors, files and other such requisites. Also a complete line of drugs and toilet articles, in addition to the Hebe Soda Fountain from which ice cold drinks are dispensed. Corner Main Street and Patton Avenue.
"Yes," said the lady as she saw her husband, a shaven-headed man, in their last resting place after being taken from the crematory "poor Harry has earned something at last, even if he couldn't earn a living."

Notice to Travelers.
Beginning to-day and continuing until further notice, a street car will leave Court House Square at 15 minutes before 8 o'clock, a. m., for the train for Spartanburg. All travelers who will take this car will have their values transported to the train free of charge. All who take the regular "depot" or "train" car, which will leave the Square at 8 o'clock a. m., as usual, will be charged 5 cents for each value and large bundle. This car also connects with the Spartanburg train, but if all persons take it there will not be time enough for all to get their tickets and checks, and many take it here while if as many as can will take the car leaving the Square at 15 minutes before 8 o'clock, they will not only save the extra charge for values on the "depot" car, but have ample time for themselves and leave ample time for others to get their checks and tickets.

ONE YEAR AGO.
The finest and best equipped Drug Store in North Carolina was opened in Asheville by T. C. Smith & Co. After eighteen years of prosperity in the wholesale and retail drug business at Charlotte, they sold out and moved to Asheville, where they secured the best and handsomest store room in the city—fitted up in style, with all the latest appliances and conveniences possessed by other modern drug stores.—Twelve months have passed since this venture was made—they find the outlook far ahead of their expectations—business growing larger monthly, having already reached a solid basis.—Their success demonstrates what Asheville will do, for those who come here with "the know how."—Prescriptions and general business have poured into this New Drug Store until necessity compels the employment of a large force of thoroughly competent clerks.—This new firm do not want the earth, only a small part of it.—They are entering the second year of their business career with new snap, large stock, ample raw cash to make large additions, big trade already established, a successful past and a bright future.—These facts show what can be done for those who have a well grounded faith in the commercial importance of our growing city—for those who have the nerve to burn all the bridges behind them, and give proper attention to their business.—The people are kindly asked to continue their favors to this prosperous and busy drug store, where every article sold is warranted as represented, or purchase money refunded.

MISCELLANEOUS.
ONE YEAR AGO.
The finest and best equipped Drug Store in North Carolina was opened in Asheville by T. C. Smith & Co. After eighteen years of prosperity in the wholesale and retail drug business at Charlotte, they sold out and moved to Asheville, where they secured the best and handsomest store room in the city—fitted up in style, with all the latest appliances and conveniences possessed by other modern drug stores.—Twelve months have passed since this venture was made—they find the outlook far ahead of their expectations—business growing larger monthly, having already reached a solid basis.—Their success demonstrates what Asheville will do, for those who come here with "the know how."—Prescriptions and general business have poured into this New Drug Store until necessity compels the employment of a large force of thoroughly competent clerks.—This new firm do not want the earth, only a small part of it.—They are entering the second year of their business career with new snap, large stock, ample raw cash to make large additions, big trade already established, a successful past and a bright future.—These facts show what can be done for those who have a well grounded faith in the commercial importance of our growing city—for those who have the nerve to burn all the bridges behind them, and give proper attention to their business.—The people are kindly asked to continue their favors to this prosperous and busy drug store, where every article sold is warranted as represented, or purchase money refunded.
